TENTH DISTRICT PLANS NEW HEALTH CENTER

Tenth District P.T.A. has purchased eight lots between West 21st st. and West 22nd st., one lot west of Grand ave., in Los Angeles for the location of a new health center building.

Title to them has been accepted by the Los Angeles Board of Education, as the district is not an incorporated organization. Funds for the new building, which is to replace the Yale Street Health Center, for the past thirty years jointly operated by Tenth District and the Board of Education, are now being raised by donations from district associations. The modern structure will cost approximately $200,000 and will be built when wartime exigencies permit.

The aim of the health center is to bring better health to the underprivileged children of the city school system. It will house the latest equipment, have adequate space, and attractive appointments and surroundings. Fully equipped laboratories, both dental and medical, complete X-ray equipment, sound proof rooms for heart examinations, and audiometer tests will be provided.

The new institution will be a health center in every sense of the term, because in it will be conducted health education of children, parents, doctors, nurses, and teachers, as well as its primary function, diagnosis and treatment.
